Thanksgiving Proclamation is Issued by Governor Stuart.

HARRISBURG, PA., Nov. 11.—Gov. Edwin Stuart to-day issued his Thanksgiving proclamation, the last he will give to the people of Pennsylvania, as follows:

"In pursuance with a well-establish-custom, I, Edwin S. Stuart, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, do hereby set apart Thursday, November, 24th, 1910, as a day for Thanksgiving and prayer.

"The custom of naming a day for thanksgiving and prayer has been observed for many years, and is one of the most beautiful heritages of our national life It is therefore meet and proper that, in the midst of our activities, we should pause to acknowledge our dependence upon the Giver of all good things and to render to Him our grateful thanks for the material and other blessings vouchsafed unto us.

"We have been favored with bountiful harvests and with freedom from plague, pestilence and famine. Our schools, libraries and educational facilities have inspired our people. Our agencies for fighting disease and preserving the health of the people have been active and efficient. But we should recognize that, over and above the power of man, a Divine Being shapes our destinies, and that His wise and loving care has directed our steps into the paths of peace, prosperity and happiness.

"On that day let us refrain from our usual vocations and, meeting in our homes, churches and places of worship, give thanks to Almighty God for His manifold mercies and blessings. Let us also remember to give aid and comfort by word and deed to the sick, the afflicted and the unfortunate.

"Given under my hand and seal of the State at the city of Harrisburg, this 11th day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten, and of the commonwealth the one hundred and thirty-fifth.

"EDWIN S. STUART."

By the Governor: Robert McAfee, Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Union Thanksgiving Service.

At 10 o'clock, a. m. Thursday, Thanksgiving Day a Union Service will be held in the First Methodist Episcopal Church. With this congregation the Baptist, Free Methodist and Presbyterian congregations and pastors will unite. Rev. Mr. Bent, of the Presbyterian church will preach the sermon, and a union choir, will be in charge of the music.

A cordial invitation is extended to all members and friends of these congregations, and to all others to join in this service. The plate offering will be sent to the Williamsport Hospital.

Gone to Kane.

Last Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Battles entertained a large party of friends at their home, West Allegany Avenue, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Pompey Scott, who left Emporium Sunday morning for Kane, where they will permanently reside. The party was largely attended by our colored population and a few white people.

Forty-Fourth Annual Teachers' Institute.

At 1:30 p. m., Monday, Oct. 24, convened the Forty-Fourth Annual Teachers' Institute. This session was opened by devotional exercises led by Rev. R. H. Bent of the Presbyterian Church.

A music drill led by Prof. Dobson then followed after which Prof. Willis Y. Welsh, of Clarion spoke on the subject, "Vital Things for Teachers." Among other things he spoke of the importance of the teaching profession. He said there were approximately 17,000,000 school children in U. S. These are taught by 500,000 teachers. The teacher has the pupil for ⅔ of the year so exert a vast influence over them.

The teacher has certain duties to preform:

1. They must esteem their profession. The profession is too little esteemed at present.
2. They must better themselves constantly along two lines, along the lines of academic subjects so as to keep in advance of the pupils and along the lines of Pedagogical advancement. The teacher should understand Psychology, he should be a positive factor, he should know that the child is not a little man or woman.
3. The teacher should understand Physiology so as to be able to properly ventilate, so as to be able to tell of the pupils eyesight.
4. The teacher should teach with enthusiasm and (5) He should teach realizing that his teaching is a great factor in the advancement of the age, and thinking of the beauty of the profession.

After a short intermission, during which the teachers renewed old acquaintances, and found new ones, the institute led by Prof. Chas. A. Dobson, sang "Lord of the Harvest."

Prof. Francis H. Green, of West Chester Normal, was introduced and took up his talk on the "Wireless Messages for the Teacher." One of the first messages is from a quotation from Shakespeare's Macbeth, "Now good digestion wait on appetite and health on both."—Health. Along with eating well, there must be sleeping well. There is a lot of religion in a basin of water and soap. The teacher must look out for his own health and for that of his pupils. The second wireless message comes from Brown up: "Learn nor account the pang dare, never grudge throe."—Learning. You should go out from this institute, larger, better men and women, with higher aspirations, and nobler inspirations. Whatever our position in life we should strive to win the degree M. S.—Master of the situation. We must master the situation, not let the situation master us. "I think saving little children and bringing them to their own, is a durned site better business than loafing around a throne." The third message is from St. Paul, "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."—Goodness. It should be our aim to make the boys and girls as beautiful as God intended them, when he first thought of them. Are we as teachers, good enough, decent enough for this great work? The fourth message is from the greatest of all, the great Teacher, "Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward."—Gladness. Along with Health, Learning and Goodness there must be Gladness. If necessary be severe in order to be kind, but never be cross or snappy. God expects everyone of us to do our duty. Catch this message from Shakespeare—Health; from Browning—Learning; from St. Paul—Goodness; from the great Teacher—Gladness.

Monday evening at the Opera House, Prof. Francis H. Green lectured on "The Nature and Worth of Wit and Humor." The lecture was well attended and enjoyed by everyone. Prof. Green is a strong man on the platform. He has a pleasing personality, and held his large audience throughout the entire discourse by his flashes of wit and gleams of humor.

TUESDAY, OCT. 25.

The morning session was opened with devotional exercises led by Rev. J. F. Anderson of the DEATH'S DOINGS.

DODSON.

The PRESS last week, referred at some length to the passing away of ROBERT C. DODSON, whose death was very deeply regretted by all who knew him. The universal regrets expressed were very general, as were the expressions of sympathy for the afflicted family, one of our most respected and happy familes whose loving consideration was always first in the heart of Robert C. Dodson. A God-fearing, conscientious gentleman, just with his fellow man he left a heritage of nobleness for others to follow.

THE FUNERAL.

The funeral was held at the family home last Saturday afternoon at two o'clock and was very largely attended, showing the high esteem in which deceased was held. The Rev. R. H. Bent, Pastor of the Presbyterian Church had charge of the service and was assisted by the Rev. J. F. Anderson, Pastor of the M. E. Church and Rev. M. L. Tate, Rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church. A quartette, composed of Messrs. Geo. A. Walker, I K. Hockley, H. C. Olmsted and C. H. Felt rendered two very appropriate selections, "Abide With Me" and Meet Me at the Portals," both being favorites of the deceased. A beautiful soprano and baritone duet, "Come Holy Spirit," was rendered by Miss Ethel Fisher and Prof. R H. Edgar, Miss Belle Husted presiding at the piano. Interment was made in the Wiley-Newton Cemetery. The floral offerings were beautiful. The honorary bearers were the Messrs. J. F. Parsons, M. C. Tulis, R.H. Hirsch, Geo. J. LaBar, F. J. Keim, Jr., and H. C. McCoy, the active casket bearers being the Messrs. E. E. Forbes, H. S. Lloyd, J. M. Davison, J. A. Fisher, W. B. Thompson and F. H. Pearsall, all closely allied with deceased, they being almost daily social callers.

Relatives from out of town who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Michael Collins, Mr. Daniel Collins and daughters, the Misses Mable and Esther and sons, Messrs. Charles and John and Miss Ida Stenson, of Austin; Mr. and Mrs. James Kelley, of Coudersport; Mrs. Ellen McCabe, of Rochester, N. Y., and Mrs. Hackett, of Buffalo, N. Y.

STECKENFINGEB.

Mrs. Hazel Steckenfinger, aged 23, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Dent Smith, of Renovo, died at Renovo hospital of typhoid fever, after an illness of several weeks, on Nov. 5th. Deceased formerly resided in Emporium and will be pleasantly remembered by our citizens.

Old Sterling Run Boy.

The PRESS is in receipt of a letter from a former Sterling Run boy, Mr. Ed. Tracey and hastened to reply to same. Ed. is located at Kenosha, Wis., and writes that he is "lost if he don't read the PRESS." Of course we cheerfully mail the paper. Like most Cameron county boys when they locate in other towns they want the PRESS—like a letter from home—to read the county news. Remember every section of Cameron county is covered almost weekly by the PRESS alone and that means no small expense. Nothing is too good for our readers and we delight to please our patrons. The very rapidly increasing circulation—without soliciation—is a fact that wide-awake advertisers should note.

Big Sale Now On.

Jasper Harris' Twelfth Annual Clearance Sale is now on in full force and is very largely patronized. The public have gotten accustomed to these bargain sales offered by this enterprising clothing merchant and watch for the dates as eagerly as a duck does for water. A visit to his store and at a glance you will be convinced of the wonderful bargains. Everything marked in plain figures and warranted as represented. Catch on while the sale lasts, Saturday, Nov. 26th is the last day for cut rates.

Read his full page advertisement in the PRESS, select your bargains desired and call.

Visits Cameron County.

Stanley A. Barr, of Lowell, Wash., son of our former citizens, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Barr, who for many years resided on Huston Hill, arrived in Emporium last Monday evening and of course called to see the PRESS. We enjoyed his visit very much, it being full of interesting information. Stanley will visit friends in this county for several weeks before returning to Washington. The many friends of the family in this section will be pleased to learn they are prosperous and happy in the west, and that they contemplate visiting Cameron county next summer.

Shot a Deer.

Mr. M. E. Confer, section foreman on the P. R. R., at this place, while hunting on Round Island, Clinton county, last Tuesday was fortunate enough to secure a fine buck, which weighed 202 pounds after it was dressed Mr. Confer is very proud of the capture.

Has Entered Hospital.

Mr. Bennett Leutze, of this place, went to Williamsport last Saturday afternoon, where he has entered the private Sanitarium of Dr. Nutt, where he is receiving treatment. We are unable at this writing to give any particulars as to his condition or the nature of his ailment.

Rail Road News.

Announcement has just been made by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company that its new station at Bristol, Pa., on the change of line which has just been made through that city will be located on Prospect street near Beaver Dam Road and between the latter and Jefferson Street.

The station building itself will be built on the street level and will contain waiting rooms, ticket office and baggage room. There will be stairways leading from the platforms on the street level to the platforms on the track level. Additional stairways will provide access to the platforms direct from the street. An entirely separate building will be provided for express business in order that passengers will not be inconvenienced by obstruction of the train platforms.

The elimination of grade crossings on the Bristol improvement is in line with the policy adopted by the Company several years ago to do away with all grade crossings on the New York Division where the track is heavier than on any other portion of the system. Including the Bristol Improvement the Company has, since January, 1900, eliminated 683 grade crossings on the lines of the system East of Pittsburgh and Erie. Between Jersey city and Philadelphia alone 88 grade crossings have been abolished in the past ten years.

The completion of the Bristol work will represent one of the most important steps taken in the plan of the late President Cassatt to eliminate grade crossings in important cities between New York and Washington. To accomplish this has involved the elevation or depression of tracks in Jersey City, Newark, Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Trenton, Bristol, Philadelphia, Chester, Wilmington, Baltimore and Washington.

It is thought now that the entire Bristol Improvement, including the change of line around the city will be completed about July of next year.

Deplorable State of Mind.

The Independent last week evidently did not feel good over the defeat of the editor's pet Berry, With it went, no doubt, that prominent "plum." The PRESS continues to give the news from all sections of the county, as usual, and shall continue to do so, after you "uses" and "sitch" have been forgotten. Poor Hockley; he is surely without a party and is looking around to catch onto any old thing, or new ism. Keep up cheer, Ikey boy, there will be more "fakes" in the future with which to allie your mighty influence.

EDITOR PRESS:—

The American people are so prone to follow a leader, like does a flock of sheep, that any fad soon takes hold of the whole country. It is refreshing to occasionally find a man who does not accept everything because a doctor says so. For the last few years I have been advising a number of my patients not to have their childrens' tonsils removed and a short time afterward had to suffer the humiliation of learning that on the strength of so-and-so having had their's removed my patients left me without a word, sought a tonsil specialist, who of course advised the operation, and had the removal performed. It was the fashion to do so. The following quotation from the Medical Record is so much to the point and expresses the idea so well that I feel it to be for the good of the community that it be brought to their notice:

TONSIL RESEARCH.

Richard B. Faulkner, M. D., Pittsburg, Pa., advocates more conservatism in removal of the faucial tonsils. The tonsil is a natural organ, and should not be removed any more than any other natural organ. The mouth is an acoustic cavity, and if you alter the shape by removing the tonsils you will necessarily change the voice. The faucial tonsil is an important phonetic organ and has other important mechanical functions. Medical and philological research in regard to the tonsils is needed badly. The lymph current near the tonsils is less active than that of the pharynx at some distance and there are lymphatic spaces around the tonsils and a system of closed canals in the follicles which do not open into any near reticulum. The external deep surface of the tonsil is surrounded with a fibrous capsule. Exposure and disease change the structure of the tonsils; cell infiltration and cicatricial tissue render absorption impossible. Blood and lymph vessels undergo compression and atrophy, rendering absorption less. The tonsils are not absorptive organs. The tonsil diseases are not fatal, but many patients die from tonsil operations. Diphtheria and other infections are less severe when they involve the tonsils and not the pharynx.—Medical Record.

The same common sense should govern this that prevails in every other operation. There are rare special and definite conditions where it is beneficial, but for their promiscuous and wholesale removal which unfortunately at present too much prevails, there is is no excuse and the reaction against it and its falling into disfavor is not far in the future. I feel that my belief is sound and am willing to stand by it even though at present it may seem to be unpopular.

Electing a Bishop.

Rev. M. L. Tate, Jos. Kaye and Hon. Josiah Howard went to Erie on Tuesday to be present and take part in the selection of a Bishop of Erie Diocese, composed of the northern tier counties. We hope to announce in this issue the conclusion of the convention. At this time it looks very much as though Rev. Dr. Israel, of Scranton, will be selected.

LATER.—The Rev. Dr. R. Israel, of Scranton, Pa., was elected Bishop for the Episcopal Diocese of Erie, recently organized. The Rev. Dr. Jones, of St. Paul's Church, of Erie, was also a candidate for the bishopric and was defeated only by a few votes.

Hunters Plenty.

Deer season opened on Tuesday, the hunters by the score being on picket duty, ready for the battle. Numerous parties are located in this county.

Fred A. Johnson, District Attorney, District Attorney F. A. Johnson, Wm. Walker, Lancaster, Pa., and L. S. Fisk, of this place, enjoyed a rabbit hunt of several days on Clear Creek.

Wm Farrell and a party of Pittsburgers, are located on Four Mile at Allen Russell's. Mrs. Farrell accompanied her husband to Emporium to visit with friends while Wm. is enjoying the hunt.

The first deer was brought to town about noon on Tuesday.

Hunters, and many would-be-hunters, are telling big yarns, working hard and having a bully good time.

A party of ten or more left Emporium this morning for their camp, located near Keating. The party consisted of Jas. Wright, E. D. White, Dr. L. R. Felt, Dawson Wright, Michael Confer, Allen Werts, M. Confer, Jr., and others. They expect to be absent for ten days. Too bad that Dr. Falk and H. S. Lloyd could not join the gang, yet we'll bet a lemon both will have business in that section before the boys get back home. LATER—Dr. Falk has joined the party.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The Post-office Department insists that we carry out the ruling of that department and discontinue sending our paper to subscribers who are more than one year in arrears on his or her subscription to this newspaper. We regret that in case those who are in arrears do not promptly remit, we shall be compelled to discontinue the paper to such addresses, placing all accounts for collection as best we can.

Remember what Holy Writ says: "Do ye unto others, etc."

We have personally aided many delinquents since the new post-office ruling, greatly to our detriment. This is imposing upon good nature a little more than our reserve patience will stand for, so we call upon all to be prompt before we swing the ax. When you see X on your paper you will understand.

Celebrated Anniversary.

The Episcopal Parish of St. Joseph, at Port Allegany, celebrated, the twenty-first anniversary of the dedication of the church last Friday, Saturday and Sunday, with appropriate services. The Ven. Archdeacon R. S. Radcliff, Rector of Grace Episcopal Church at Ridgway, conducted the services, assisted by the Rector, the Rev. Frank Cady and the Rev. M. L. Tate, Rector of Emmanuel Church at this place. The parish have recently purchased a new Rectory and for this purpose the celebration was held. The collections taken at this time were devoted to the purpose of paying the debt. Special music was rendered at each service. Last Sunday's services were very impressive and large congregations were present each time. W. S. Sterner of this place, attended the services, assisting the choir. St. Joseph's Parish is now in a prosperous condition and with the Rev. Cady, who is very popular with his congregation, as head of the Parish, there is no reason why all should not be well with St. Joseph's Parish.

Union Friendly Society.

One of the most enjoyable evenings known to the Union Friendly Society, was spent at the home of the Misses Elsie and Hilda Kuehne, last Thursday evening, when they entertained the society in honor of their guest Miss Phyllis Deitman, of Buffalo. About thirty members and guests were present. The evening was pleasantly spent in playing pool, billiards and music. The Kuehne home is an ideal place for a good time and a guest is made to feel perfectly at home. During the evening delicious refreshments were served in the "wee sma' hours" the guests departed for their homes. The next meeting of the society will be held at the home of Miss Bessie McQuay, Vine street.

Delicious Apples.

James B. Hayes, of The Warner, received a few days ago a letter from his brother George E. Hayes, who is a large fruit grower at Winchester, Va., whom he had not heard from in fourteen years—in fact his family had long since given him up for dead. Of course James was pleased to hear from his long-lost brother and was also pleased to get by express, prepaid, a barrel of delicious apples. Winchester region is one of the largest apple growing sections of the United States, its fruit being fully equal to that of California. So great is the demand for that fruit that many thousands of bushels have been shipped north this fall. Ye editor sampled the fruit and it was very fine. Like Sherman's March to the Sea, when Phil Sheridan made his famous ride to Winchester his boys caused the delicious apples sprout from the ground.

Purchased Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. William Benty, who have conducted the Cottage Hotel at this place for the past two years, has purchased a hotel at Danville, Pa., and will depart for that place the last of the week. WHY HOGS ARE HIGH

PEOPLE HAVE THE MONEY TO PURCHASE MEAT.

Well-Paid American Workers Are Able to Eat All the Hogs the Farmers Can Raise—Some Pertinent Facts.

The Iowa farmer is selling his hogs at nine dollars per hundred or more.

What enables him to receive such a price?

The answer is that the people of the United States are practically all employed in occupations which give back fair returns. The people have the money with which to buy pork.

Why do the people of the United States have plenty to do?

The answer is they have plenty to do because they produce nearly everything which they wear or use. They do not import from China, Japan and India the products of the cheapest labor in the world.

If the American ports were all thrown open in the interest of the consumer to give him cheap goods, the consumer would be the first man injured. The consumer is carried in the imagination as a man who draws a salary. If all our manufactured products were made in other lands, he would not be drawing a salary. He would be out of employment. Under no circumstances could he compete with China, Japan or even France or Belgium.

Why are cattle and hogs cheaper in Canada than in the states? The answer is Canada does not have people enough to consume her own products. She must ship abroad. Give Canada people enough to consume her own products and certain classes of farming will be just as profitable in Canada as in the states.

When the Canadian farmer has all he can do to grow the necessary products for Canada he will become a rich man.

Why is cattle and grain growing in Argentine and Australia not as profitable as in the United States?

The answer is the farmers of Argentine and Australia are compelled to ship all their surplus products abroad. If the people of Argentine and Australia were in sufficient numbers to consume all their own products every farmer in those countries would grow rich.

The question is now up to the American farmer relative to the surrender of the American market to the foreign manufacturer.

When that is done, the American farmer will find himself on an equality with the farmers in Australia and Argentine. They have plenty of products, but no consumers.

By the influence of the free traders there is no duty upon the higher-priced gloves for ladies. As a consequence all such gloves are made in France. There is a protective duty on men's gloves, and they are made in America. The manufacturers of gloves for ladies are growing rich on the open American market. The large department stores in New York and Chicago are the manufacturers of gloves for ladies and their factories are in France. They are making millions out of their free-trade privileges. This same thing would happen in other industries if put to the test. The only difference would be that if free trade were adopted in relation to all manufactured products, the American market would not be so good as it is now, for the people would not have the means with which to buy.

The Iowa farmer would be broken-hearted if he were notified today that the price of hogs had gone down to $3.50 per hundred. The Iowa farmer had better think this question over, regardless of any particular friends he may have among the politicians.

What is friendship to a farmer when the price of his hogs might go down from $9 to $3.50?

If the Democrats visit the penalties of the lower tariff on the people of Iowa, they will soon be found praying for the rocks and mountains to fall upon them to hide them.—Des Moines Capital.

Some New Tail.

"The history of the Democratic party has been a long story of flirting with unsound finance. In the old days it was state banks, in the 70's it was fiat money, in the 90's it was an attempt to dilute the honest dollar with silver, and 1908 it was the guaranty of bank deposits. To what kite-like vagary will they become the tail next?"—Fostoria Review.

Roosevelt on the Tariff.

At St. Louis Colonel Roosevelt defended the present position of the Republican party in regard to the tariff. He said the party was united on the doctrine that the tariff should be such as to equalize the cost of production here and abroad, and that it should be regulated by a commission.

Taft's Economies.

"On the question of economy the Taft administration has made a record. Instead of the gradual increase in demands for the various departments there has been a practical scaling of estimates without hampering efficiency until the estimates of the cost of government under Taft are placed at $1,096,952,051, against $1,136,454,697 under the last Cleveland regime. Here as elsewhere, he never has posed, has talked little and accomplished much."—Commercial Tribune.

PUTS THE ISSUE SQUARELY

Col. Roosevelt Sets Forth the Position of the Parties on the Tariff Question.

Ex-President Roosevelt gave the Republican tariff doctrine in his St. Louis speech as follows:

"Now, my friends, one of the questions about which there has been much discussion the last year or so is the tariff, and it seems to me that, from our standpoint, from the Republican standpoint, the issue is much clearer than some people would have us believe. I cheerfully admit that there was a time when, if our opponents had acted with reasonable wisdom they might have caused us some trouble; but they proved worthy of the trust that we have had in them, and they did not act with reasonable wisdom; they let the opportunity go by, and now I think matters have cleared so that we can state our position in a way that will entitle us not only to the support of all the members of our own party, but to the support of all independent and progressive citizens.

"The Republican party is united on the doctrine officially set forth in its national platform two years ago, that the tariff shall be such as substantially to equalize the cost of production here and abroad. As the cost of production is labor cost, this means primarily that the duties should be great enough to continue to give our laboring men that higher standard of living which primarily distinguishes the American wage worker from the wage worker of other and less fortunate countries. Now, not only is this the doctrine of the Republican party, but I believe it is the doctrine of the overwhelming majority of the American people. If our opponents do not believe that I most earnestly hope they will make the fight squarely on that issue."

Why Democratic Success?

Democratic success cannot come through any exploitation of Democratic action; it cannot come through any reference to what the Democratic party did the last time it was in power; it cannot come through any promises that the Democratic platform has made for the future, for the only promise that is made at all emphatic by any Democratic speaker or paper is the threat to pass through the house a tariff for revenue only, and the people of the country are not ready to accept a revision of that sort. The question then arises, will the Democratic party without a record of anything accomplished and only with a history that cannot be repeated, expect to be returned to power simply because of a dissatisfaction and unrest that has swept over the country because of the higher cost of living, when it can be shown beyond question that in no way can the higher cost of living be attributed to the last Republican revision of the tariff.

Arguments That Count.

When the arguments that will influence voters in the approaching congressional elections are sifted down to an irreducible minimum this fact of the country's prosperity is going to show up large. Singularly enough, endeavor is being made to create dissatisfaction with the new tariff in the south and central west. The south is getting 16 cents a pound for its cotton—nearly three times the price prevailing under the last Democratic tariff—and the west is getting $1 per bushel for its wheat and 65 cents for its corn, or just about double the prices obtained under the Wilson-Gorman tariff. The Republican party in the campaign that is ahead will stand upon the policies and the record of the party and will win. It is only a question this year, as it was two years ago, of how large the Republican majority in the next house is going to be.—Capitol Hill (Okla.) News.

A Sample "Argument."

A few weeks ago a man was holding forth on the iniquities of the tariff, when one of the bystanders asked him just what particular thing he could name that was wrong about it.

"Look at how shoes have gone up," he said. "Why didn't they take the duty off hides and reduce it on boots and shoes? It is plain robbery."

The bystander happened to have a "Spike A" in his pocket and pulled it out. "Let's see what they did do about hides and shoes," he said. "Here it is: 'Hides placed on free list; boots and shoes, tariff reduced 60 per cent.' Is that what made the price of shoes go up?"

But the growler kept on growling. If it wasn't hides and leather, it must be something else and that is about the unusal amount of information possessed by loud-mouthed critics of the new tariff.—Burlington (Col.) Republican.

If wages and conditions are not better here than in other countries, why do a million wage-earners a year seek homes in the United States?

Election of Little Importance.

Mr. Taft says wisely that the New York election of this year has nothing to do with the presidential election of two years hence. Not for the Republicans. Had the Democrats nominated Gaynor it would have meant much for them, since, in the event of Gaynor's election, he would have become their presidential candidate as inevitably as Cleveland did after his election in New York in 1882. A party which is looking only for a winner may even take Dix in the event of his election.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

WELLMAN OF BALLOON FAME

Walter Wellman, who failed in his daring attempt to cross the Atlantic in the big dirigible balloon America has had a career of thrilling adventure. He was born in Mentor, Ohio, November 3, 1850, and is of English descent. When fifteen years old he established a paper at Sutton, Neb. In 1876 he went to Philadelphia and abandoned the country newspaper field for the metropolitan. He had barely attained his majority when he established the Cincinnati Evening Post. Soon afterward he became a free lance in journalism.

In the early eighties for a year or two he was city editor of the Chicago Herald. He covered the legislative sessions at Springfield and was sent to Washington as correspondent. At the national capital he scored frequent newspaper triumphs and soon won recognition for his judgment and powers of analysis, particularly in reporting political campaigns.

His first voyage of discovery was made in 1892, when, commissioned by the Chicago Herald, he established the spot on which Columbus landed on San Salvador. Arctic exploration next cast its lure about Mr. Wellman. In fifteen years he made five trips into the frozen north. In 1894 he led an expedition, reaching 81 degrees north. He placed many new islands on the map and made such a valuable collection of scientific data that his second voyage north in 1898 aroused keen interest among geographers.

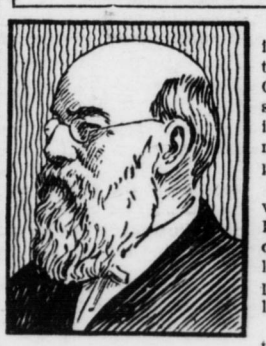
In 1906 he announced that he would seek the pole by aerial route. He had a dirigible balloon built and it was taken to Spitzbergen, but it turned out to be defective and the trip that year had to be abandoned. The next year found Mr. Wellman back at his camp on Dane's island, with a rebuilt balloon. A start was made September 2, but a furious gale came up and drove the airship back. A landing was made on a glacier.

Two years later, in 1900, Mr. Wellman was back for the third time at Dane's island with the America, again remodeled. When the start was made, after covering 32 miles the equilibrator parted. The big dirigible was towed back to its landing place, when a gust of wind carried it careening over the ice hummocks and it exploded.

The discovery of the pole by Peary took away the main lure of arctic voyages, and Mr. Wellman, turning his thoughts in another direction, announced last July that he would try a transatlantic voyage by airship. This also proved disastrous after he had covered over 500 miles of the distance to Europe.

In abandoning their craft the crew of the airship America lowered themselves into the lifeboat which swung beneath it. Then they cast the life-boat off and were afloat on the sea. The airship, relieved of the weight of the lifeboat, shot high into the air and was blown away rapidly. The transfer of the Wellman party from the life-boat to the steamer Trent, which picked them up, was made with great difficulty.

LEADER IN PUBLIC AFFAIRS



One of the recognized leaders in public affairs is the Rev. Washington Gladden. For half a century in New York, Massachusetts and Ohio Dr. Gladden has been a great influence in the church, society and politics. His friends declare that it is due to his influence and efforts that public morality in Columbus was advanced to a higher plane.

Prior to 1884 the state election in Ohio always preceded the national election by a month. Every four years on this account there was a condition of vast turmoil when the different political influences were at work. Dr. Gladden was pastor of the First Congregational church of Columbus when he set at the work of public reform.

His first appeal was for a change in the election law. He wrote about the evils of the system, appealed to public men and sent out a petition for signatures at his own expense. A few dollars thus expended enabled him to arouse popular enthusiasm and his point was carried.

In 1900 Dr. Gladden, to defeat antagonistic interests in the Columbus city council, announced himself as an aldermanic candidate and was elected. He served two years, taking an active and important part in street railway, gas, electric light and interurban policies.

It took some bravery to attempt to amend the constitution of a great state like Ohio, and time and energy to oppose a great political organization, but Dr. Gladden proved his mettle, and he is generally recognized today as a great vital force in the uplifting of important community interests.

NOW GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK

Lieutenant Governor Horace White of Syracuse became governor of the state of New York when Charles E. Hughes retired to go upon the Supreme court bench at Washington. For three months Mr. White will be governor of the Empire state and, logically, he should succeed himself, the chosen of the people. But, though unanimously nominated two years ago for lieutenant governor, his name was not even mentioned at the recent nominating convention at Saratoga. The new governor will do his work for a brief three months, but his political career, once so brilliantly promising, his friends feel, is closed in all probability.

Belonging to one of the most prominent and respected families in the state, possessing all the advantages of education and social position and wealth, with a record of 13 years in the state senate and with the reputation of an orator and genial gentleman of the most polished manners, Governor White, at the age of forty-five, finds himself beyond the pale so far as further political preferment is concerned, although there may come a rehabilitation and a restoration to public favor in years hence.

And all this because of his lamentable connection with the People's Mutual Life Association and League of Syracuse. Mr. White all along has maintained that he did no wrong and that what he did was in his capacity as legal adviser, but to the skirts of the lieutenant governor has clung enough of the onus of the transaction to injure his immediate future politically.

HEADS THE WOMAN TEACHERS

In 1905 Miss Grace C. Strachan placed herself at the head of the army of women teachers at Brooklyn, N. Y., in their fight for better pay. Her ambition was to see the day when her associates would receive as much pay for their services as the janitors. She made her point plainer by demonstrating that the average pay of women teachers at Washington, D. C., was not equal to that received by the city dog catcher.

She is now president of the Interborough Association of Women School Teachers of the City of New York, and has perfected an ideal organization. As the head of 15,000 women school teachers she is trying to have the state of New York place male and female teachers upon an equal pay basis. Three bills to bring about this were vetoed, but the fight is still in progress.

Her great effort has been to make the organization work as a unit. She has been discouraged by business men and politicians, but a champion was found in the late Senator Patrick H. McCarren, who introduced her first bill in behalf of the movement.

She maintains that women should receive equal pay with men for the same work, and she is receiving a good deal of popular encouragement.

Are Ghosts Real Stuff?

By RENE BACHE

AFTER all, it seems that there really are such things as ghosts. Science at last accords them a somewhat belated recognition—though, of course, refusing to acknowledge that they are supernatural. On the contrary (according to the newly accepted theory), they are to be classed as natural phenomena, chemical in character.

Why is it that ghosts, since time immemorial, have been so intimately associated with graveyards? Why is it that the dead in cemeteries are so universally believed to "walk" at night? Why, when specters walk, are they so generally accustomed (in popular belief) to be sheeted—that is to say, clad in winding sheets—though nowadays people are nearly always buried in ordinary clothing?

These questions, and others equally interesting, in regard to phantoms, science is now for the first time prepared to answer. As to the first point, the reputation graveyards have for being haunted is attributable to the fact that ghosts, of the kind now recognized as real, do actually and not infrequently walk about in such places. They are seen at night (rather than in the daytime) because their chemical constitution is such that they can not be visible except in darkness. Finally, they are (or rather, appear to be) "sheeted" for the reason that the gases of which they are composed—here we begin to come to the explanation—flicker and waver in a fashion suggestive of garments.

For some reason not easy to explain, the dead are supposed to be hostile to the living. Few people there be who would not run, terror-stricken, from a ghost, if they thought they saw one. But, making all allowance for this fact, and for the influence of imagination, it still seems strange that the conviction that a graveyard is a dangerous and dreadful place to venture into at night should be so widespread even among educated persons. Nobody objects to entering, or wandering through, a burying ground in the daytime—rather the contrary, indeed, most cemeteries being attractive spots. But at night it is different.

The real cause of this fear lies in the circumstance that phantoms, for reasons presently to be made clear, are, and always have been, haunters of graveyards. People have been frightened by them time and time again, in such places. Other persons, who have not seen them, and who have professed disbelief, have nevertheless been influenced by testimony of the sort. Not often has anybody, witnessing a phenomenon of this kind, attempted to investigate it. Much safer does it seem under such circumstances to take to one's heels.

Nothing but the skepticism of science can fortify a man against the terror of such an experience. But, as it chanced, some years ago, a government anthropologist, of high reputation (now connected with the department of agriculture), Prof. W. J. McGee, had an opportunity to study this matter at first hand. He was living at the time in a small town, in the middle west, where, only a few weeks earlier, a burglar, engaged in the exercise of his hazardous profession, had been shot to death. Hastily buried, he might have been expected to refrain from disturbing the community further—instead of which, he proceeded to "walk," his ghost being repeatedly seen by a number of reliable witnesses, stalking about the potter's field where his grave was located.

Professor McGee, being appealed to on the subject, in his capacity of scientific investigator, finally consented to look into it. He went to the potter's field on a moonless night, sat down a short distance from the grave (carelessly left only half filled up) which had been pointed out to him as that of the late burglar, and proceeded to wait for something to happen. Nothing did happen for quite a while, and he was just making up his mind that he had come on a fool's errand when he descried a dim light immediately over the grave. As he gazed it became steadily more vivid and distinct, appearing to hover in the air—a flame-like, restless thing, about the height of a man and rather strikingly resembling the popular conception of a ghost.

When he attempted to approach the strange object it disappeared. He went back to the place where he had been seated, and it became visible again. Every now and then a gust of wind would seem to "blow it out," and it would vanish for the moment, presently reappearing. Apparently its movements were caused by the breeze, its wavering suggesting drapery. But presently the professor saw another ghost, of similar aspect, not far away, and then another and another, until there were at least half a dozen. It was not surprising that the townspeople (crediting a report to the effect that the burglar's wife and children, deprived of the family breadwinner, had died of starvation) should declare that these unfortunates came at night to dance over the graves.

Porfessor McGee found it impossible to get within a dozen feet of the phantoms, which would always vanish on his near approach. He is unable to explain this circumstance; but he became convinced through careful study of the apparitions that they were nothing more nor less than gaseous emanations of a self-luminous character. In all probability they were largely composed of phosphorus, derived from the dead bodies of people buried in the potter's field.

Here, then, is an explanation of the reason why ghosts haunt burying grounds. They are in fact a natural (not supernatural) product of graveyards, as one might say. In the body of an adult human being there are 55 ounces of phosphorus, seven-eighths of this quantity being contained in the bones (where it goes to make phosphate of lime), while there are 4½ ounces in the red corpuscles of the blood, and nearly half an ounce in the brain.

The processes of decay set this phosphorus free in the gaseous state—under which circumstances, atmospheric conditions being favorable, it is liable to produce, in the night time, effects such as those above described. As is well known, decomposing vegetable matter in swampy places yields an emanation that is highly phosphorescent, causing the phenomenon termed "will-o'-the-wisp," or "elf fire." It is not reasonable to suppose that there is some relation, in respect to cause, between the will-o'-the-wisp (which occasionally misleads unfortunate travelers into boggy places) and the "corpse candles" said to be often seen moving about in the mysterious and awesome darkness of cemeteries? The "sheeted dead" are alleged to carry these candles in their ghostly hands when they walk about among the graves at night.

The skeleton of an adult human being contains about four pounds of the metal calcium. This, in fact, is the most abundant metallic element of the body structure. In the fluids of the body, also, there is a good deal of it. But calcium and phosphorus, when combined, form a self-ignitable substance. Indeed, water will set it on fire. If a bit of phosphide of calcium be dropped into a saucer of water, it will instantly burst into flame, on which account, in the laboratory, to protect it from dampness, it has to be kept in an air-tight jar.

Three other self-ignitable substances, all of them metals, are contained in the human body. One of these (about two ounces in quantity) is the silvery-white magnesium—of familiar use for flashlight purposes by photographers. The other two are sodium and potassium—rather more than five ounces of each. A piece of the former, if thrown into water, bursts into a rosy flame, and swims about violently on the surface until burned out. The latter is likewise set afire by contact with water, on touching which it explodes like fireworks, throwing a shower of sparks into the air. As for magnesium, it is so fiercely combustible that it has to be kept tightly corked in glass bottles, to prevent it from igniting.

Thus is appears that the human body contains, in considerable quantities, quite a number of substances which are self-ignitable, and fiercely so, on coming into contact with water. The marvel is that we refrain from going off by spontaneous combustion, so to speak, while we are alive. When burned, these substances, of course, convert themselves into gases, which are luminous. Under favoring graveyard conditions (the processes of decay going on very gradually), they pass off slowly, by evaporation, and not in any such way as that above described. They present themselves to the view, in darkness, as mere chemical emanations—luminescent, blown about by light airs, or dissipated entirely for the moment by a passing gust of wind. In all probability they consist mainly of phosphorus.

One cannot capture a ghost of this kind. It cannot be trapped in a box or a bottle and conveyed to a scientific laboratory for examination or analysis. Hence it is likely that the true composition of phantoms will forever remain as much a mystery as it is today. But (supposing the theory here set forth to be correct) it is a comfort to know, in a general way, what graveyard spectres are made of.

When people are murdered, and their bodies (as often hapens) are buried in cellars or other damp places their ghosts, for the chemical reasons already given, are particularly likely to walk. So says Prof. Charles F. Munroe, a famous chemist, and dean of the George Washington university, who even goes so far as to declare that he could at a pinch produce in his laboratory phantoms in all important respects corresponding to those which graveyards are popularly supposed to manufacture.

Speaking Over the Wire

Some Pointers to Be Remembered by Those Who Are Users of the Telephone.

Most men—and women—use more nervous force in speaking through the telephone than would be needed to keep them strong and healthy for years.

Nature knows no strain. True science knows no strain. Therefore a strained, high-pitched voice does not carry over the telephone wire as well as a low one.

Impatience, rudeness, indecision and diffuseness blur communication by telephone even more than they do when one is face to face with the person talking.

It is as if the wire itself resented these inhuman phases of humanity and spit back at the person who insulted it by trying to transmit over it such unintelligent bosh.

To a demanding woman, who is strained and tired herself, a wait of ten seconds seems ten minutes. I have heard such a woman ring the telephone bell almost without ceasing for 15 minutes. I could hear her strain and anger reflected in the ringing of the bell. When finally she "got her party" the strain in her high-pitched voice made it impossible for her to be clearly understood. Then she got angry again because "central" had not "given her a better connection," and finally came away from the telephone nearly in a state of nervous collapse, and insisted that the telephone would finally end her life. I do not think that she once suspected that the whole state of fatigue which had almost brought an illness upon her was absolutely and entirely her own fault.—Annie Payson Call, in Nerves and Common Sense.

CHARACTER is the seal of a noble mind, the ornament and pride of man, the sweetest charm of woman, the scorn of rascals and the rarest virtue of sociability.

—Sternan.

For a Yellow Luncheon.

During the golden rod season a very attractive luncheon may be served. Let the rooms and porches be decorated with the feathery yellow blossom, having all the table pieces low and not too large.

For the menu serve a delicate soup like cream of celery, and on top of each place a spoonful of whipped cream, and for the yellow color just a suggestion of egg yolk from a hard-cooked egg put through a ricer or sieve. If one wishes to omit the soup, a fruit course may be substituted, or both may be served. For the fruit course, the rich yellow of musk melons served in balls made with a French potato cutter and dressed with a bit of lemon juice and powdered sugar, is very good. For the main dish, chicken croquettes with white sauce garnished with grated yellow cheese, might prove most appetizing.

With the ice cream, which will be plain vanilla, serve preserved yellow pumpkin. It tastes much better than it sounds and is a beautiful yellow to carry out the color scheme. Cut the pumpkin in dainty cubes and preserve with orange and lemon. It is the custom with many who entertain, when carrying out a color scheme, to tie the rolls with ribbon of the color used in the decoration. Ribbon seems very much out of place on food; it may be used in the table decoration to advantage or to tie up small boxes of candy as favors or in countless pleasing ways, but as an ornament or garnish for food, it seems inappropriate.

Mustard Pickles.

Take two quarts of small cucumbers, the same of small onions and tomatoes, one quart of wax beans, three green peppers chopped fine. Let stand in salt water to cover over night, using half a cupful of salt in enough water to cover the vegetables, put a weight upon them. In the morning scald until tender in clear water, drain and pour over the following mustard preparation: Mix one-half pound of mustard, one-fourth of an ounce of turmeric, three teaspoonfuls of celery seed and three-fourths of a cup of flour. Slowly add four quarts of vinegar and cook until smooth.

THE grandest thing in having rights," said George McDonald, "is that, being your rights, you can give them up." "Love seeketh not its own." It is ready always to yield even that which it might justly claim.

Digestible and Nutritious Foods.

There are those, who even yet, after much has been said and written about foods, their digestibility and value in repairing waste and building tissue, speak of digestible and nutritious as synonymous terms.

Foods may be very easily digested that contain little nutriment, for example, the oyster is easily digested but is not as nutritious as we once supposed it to be. Gelatine is easily digested but is of little value as a food. The tissue-building foods are milk, cheese, eggs, fish, lean meat poultry, dried beans, peas, nuts and grains.

Those foods that supply muscular energy and if eaten in excess are stored in the body in the form of fat, are underground vegetables, corn, rice, bacon, olive oil, cream, butter, grapes, dates, figs, honey and sugar. A digestible food is one that is assimilated, a nutritious food is one that repairs waste, builds tissue and gives heat and energy.

To Can Tomatoes.

Take one gallon of water, one cupful of salt and when boiling drop in peeled tomatoes and cook until thoroughly scalded, place in cans, using a skimmer to drain off all the brine. The juice of the tomatoes will make enough liquid to cover and the brine may be reheated for other tomatoes. The brine at last may be canned as it will be less salty after using and after straining it may be used for soups.

Corn Relish.

Cut corn from 12 ears of corn, chop a small head of cabbage fine, sprinkle salt all over the cabbage and let it stand three hours. Drain off the water and put corn and cabbage together, add one cupful of sugar, two quarts of vinegar, one-half cupful of ground mustard, four small red peppers chopped fine cook all until tender, seal in bottles or pint cans. If one does not like cabbage, celery may be substituted.

Water Melon Rind Pickles.

Peel the rind and cut in one-inch slices, let stand over night in salt water. Make a syrup of four pounds of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of ground cinnamon, one teaspoonful of cloves and two quarts of vinegar. Tie the spices in a cloth, pour the hot syrup over the drained melon rind, add the slices, let stand 24 hours and reheat the syrup four mornings in succession, over for winter use.

FENCE PREVENTS WOLVES FROM DEVOURING SHEEP

Best Protection Against Destructive Beasts Is Woven Wire Fence With Barb Wire Stretched Across the Top.

In answering a query as to the best method of preventing wolves from destroying a sheep flock, the Wisconsin Agriculturist publishes the following:

Many bells on a flock of sheep will no doubt do good service toward keeping wolves off though they would not be proof against attacks from the bolder animals. A few well trained shepherd dogs would serve the purpose better and would make very serviceable animals in other respects in helping to attend to large flocks. The best protection against wolves for the flocks, however, would be wolf-tight woven wire fence, with barb wires stretched at the top so as to prevent the wolves from getting over and into the sheep pastures. Such a fence must also be built close to the ground to present the wolves from digging their way through underneath. A barb wire stretched tightly along the ground line will be very serviceable in this respect. The woven wire fence should be at least as high as any farm fence ordinarily in use is, and pieces of 2x4's should be nailed or spiked to the tops of all the posts projecting outward from the field enclosed for sheep pasture at an angle of 45 degrees to the upper parts of the posts. The pieces of 2x4's should be 18 to 20 inches long and to them the barb wires should be stapled. The fence thus made will prevent the wolves from getting over as they cannot get over the projecting bark wire arrangement even though they manage to get up the woven wire to its top. The accompanying illustration shows clearly how the fence is built. Such a fence is of service to any sheep farmer who wishes an efficient means of protecting his flocks against sheep-killing dogs as well as against wolves.

High Prices for Horses.

We may well doubt the prediction that the automobile will soon put the horse out of business and reports from every section of the west show that well-bred animals are selling at $350 to $500 per pair.

COMFORT FOR FARM STOCK

Should Be Fed at Regular Times and Never Roughly Handled by Being Chased by Dog or Left in Cold.

(By A. D. WILSON, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.)

One of our good dairy farmers, living in Carlton county, who is also a Farmers' Institute lecturer, Mr. F. B. McLeran, in talking on "Care of Dairy Cattle," always emphasizes the importance of making the stock comfortable. He says that if they are made uncomfortable by being fed at irregular times, so that they spend a great deal of their time expecting to be fed, the discomfort shows in lower production. If they are made uncomfortable by having a poor bed, by being roughly handled, by having a dog set on them, or by being left out in the cold or allowed to go thirsty, these conditions result in decreased production. He emphasizes the fact that one of the great advantages of weighing the milk every day, from each cow, is that it gives one a quick check on any condition that brings about discomfort to his animals. If any cow shows a dropping off of her milk flow, as a rule a little observation will show that she has been made uncomfortable in some of the ways mentioned above; and, knowing these facts, the farmer is able to check these unfavorable conditions quickly.

One of the points that Mr. McLeran especially emphasizes is the importance of not allowing the cows to stay out in the winter when they are uncomfortable. He states that a good way to determine this is to take off your coat and go out in the yard with the cows, stand around and act just as the cows do. When you begin to feel uncomfortable and feel like going into the house, put the cows in the barn.

Autos on the Farm.

Some people have an idea that the farmer will not be able to properly care for his machine, but my experience has been that the farmers who have called for licenses have been fully conversant with the workings of their machines—in fact, many farmers are better informed on mechanics, gasoline engines and the like than the average city man who applies for a license. There is another view held by many city people which is wrong, and that is that the farmer will be content with a small horsepower motor car, says a writer in Baltimore American. As a matter of fact, when a farmer gets a car he wants it so constructed that he can use it for pleasure and for business, and that is the reason that they generally want their cars to have 40 horsepower or better. Time and help are the two things now at a premium on the Ohio farm, and, as an auto saves both, there is an increasing interest in the subject I feel certain that the present fall and spring will be by far the best selling time for farm autos ever seen.

HOW ENGLISH RUN DAIRIES

Cows Are Not Soiled to Any Great Extent but Pasture Is Depended Upon for Entire Summer Feed.

In England cows are not soiled to any great extent but pasture is depended upon for the entire summer feed. They say over there that it takes two acres to keep a cow going as she should.

Early in August the cows are turned on the aftermath of the meadows and later changed back and forth between the pastures and the meadow.

When taken off the pastures in late summer the cows are fed a little cotton seed cake but they do not get much grain at any time.

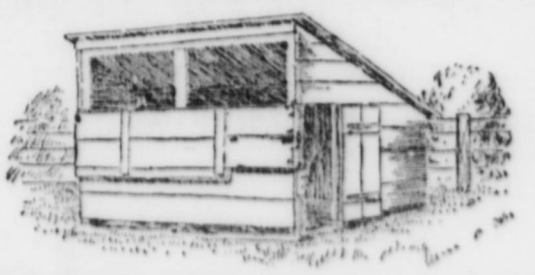
In the winter they are fed roots—40 to 70 pounds per day, about 15 pounds of straw, half as much hay and about eight pounds of meal and oil cake mixed.

The barn yards are paved with cobble stones to keep the cows out of the mud and the manure is saved under sheds. Not a thing is wasted.

There are very few creameries in England and the butter on the market is all farm butter but it is of fine quality, generally a great deal better than our farmers make.

The prices for milk for the year averages about $1.50 per 100 pounds, after the freight is paid.

COMFORTABLE FARROWING PEN



The brood sows must have dry and reasonably warm quarters. The accompanying illustration gives us a fairly good idea of one style of a litter pen. It is roomy and its long panel doors when opened admit of plenty of light and air. This style of a pen is handier for the attendant than are the triangular shaped sheds. These pens can be more easily cleaned and bedded.

Many Goats in Country.

It is estimated that there are over 2,000,000 goats in this country and all are practically free from tuberculosis. Thousands of them are milk goats and are used regularly for this purpose.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS
COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. The servants desert. Gertrude and Halsey arrive with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped. Gertrude was suspected because of an injured foot. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey were called away by a telegram. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, told Halsey that while she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Dr. Walker was the man. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase. Recovering consciousness, she said something had brushed by her on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. After "seeing a ghost," Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead with a slip in his pocket bearing the name of "Lucien Wallace." Dr. Walker asked Miss Innes to vacate in favor of Mrs. Armstrong. She refused. A note from Bailey to Gertrude arranging a meeting at night was found. A ladder out of place deepens the mystery. The stables were burned. During the excitement a man stole into the house. A search failed to reveal him. Miss Innes shot an intruder. A man limping was seen on the road.

"Did they go toward the club?" Gertrude asked suddenly, leaning forward.

"No, miss. I think they came into the village. I didn't get a look at their faces, but I know every chick and child in the place, and everybody knows me. When they didn't shout at me—in my uniform, you know—I took it they were strangers."

So all we had for our afternoon's work was this: Some one had been shot by the bullet that went through the door; he had not left the village, and he had not called in a physician. Also, Dr. Walker knew who Lucien Wallace was, and his very denial made me confident that, in that one direction at least, we were on the right track.

"Gertrude," I said, "I have been a very seifish old woman. You are going to leave this miserable house tonight. Annie Morton is going to Scotland next week, and you shall go right with her."

To my surprise, she flushed painfully.

"I don't want to go, Aunt Ray," she said. "Don't make me leave now."

"You are losing your health and your good looks," I said decidedly. "You should have a change."

"I shan't stir a foot." She was equally decided. Then, more lightly: "Why, you and Liddy need me to arbitrate between you every day in the week."

Perhaps I was growing suspicious of every one, but it seemed to me that Gertrude's gayety was forced and artificial. I watched her covertly during the rest of the drive, and I did not like the two spots of crimson in her pale cheeks. But I said nothing more about sending her to Scotland; I knew she would not go.

CHAPTER XXV.

A Visit from Louise.

That day was destined to be an eventful one, for when I entered the house and found Eliza ensconsed in the upper hall on a chair, with Mary Anne doing her best to stifle her with household ammonia, and Liddy rubbing her wrists—whatever good that is supposed to do—I knew that the ghost had been walking again, and this time in daylight.

Eliza was in a frenzy of fear. She clutched at my sleeve when I went close to her, and refused to let go until she had told her story. Coming just after the fire, the household was demoralized, and it was no surprise to me to find Alex and the undergardener struggling downstairs with a heavy trunk between them.

"I didn't want to do it, Miss Innes," Alex said. "But she was so excited I was afraid she would do as she said—drag it down herself, and scratch the staircase."

I was trying to get my bonnet off and to keep the maids quiet at the same time. "Now, Eliza, when you have washed your face and stopped bawling," I said, "come into my sitting room and tell me what has happened."

Liddy put away my things without speaking. The very set of her shoulders expressed disapproval.

"Well," I said, when the silence became uncomfortable, "things seem to be warming up."

Silence from Liddy, and a long sigh.

"If Eliza goes, I don't know where to look for another cook." More silence.

"Rosie is probably a good cook." Sniff.

"Liddy," I said at last, "don't dare to deny that you are having the time of your life. You positively gloat in this excitement. You never looked better. It's my opinion all this running around, and getting jolted out of a rut, has stirred up that torpid liver of yours."

"It's not myself I'm thinking about," she said, goaded into speech. "Maybe my liver was torpid, and maybe it wasn't; but I know this: I've got some feelings left, and to see you standing at the foot of that staircase shootin' through the door—I'll never be the same woman again."

"Well, I'm glad of that—anything for a change," I said. And in came Eliza, flanked by Rosie and Mary Anne.

Her story, broken with sobs and corrections from the other two, was this: At two o'clock (2:15, Rosie insisted) she had gone upstairs to get a picture from her room to show Mary Anne. (A picture of a lady, Mary Anne interposed.) She went up the servants' staircase and along the corridor to her room, which lay between the trunkroom and the unfinished ballroom. She heard a sound as she went down the corridor like some one moving furniture, but she was not nervous. She thought it might be men examining the house after the fire the night before, but she looked in the trunkroom and saw nobody.

She went into her room quietly. The noise had ceased and everything was quiet. Then she sat down on the side of her bed, and, feeling faint—she was subject to spells—("I told you that when I came, didn't I, Rosie?" "Yes'm, indeed she did!")—she put her head down on her pillow and—

"Took a nap. All right!" I said. "Go on."

"When I came to, Miss Innes, sure as I'm sittin' here, I thought I'd die. Somethin' hit me in the face, and I set up, sudden. And then I seen the plaster drop, droppin' from a little hole in the wall. And the first thing I knew, an iron bar that long (fully two yards by her measure) "shot through that hole and tumbled on the bed. If I'd been still sleeping" ("Fainting," corrected Rosie) "I'd 'a' been hit on the head and killed!"

"I wisht you'd heard her scream," put in Mary Anne. "And her face as white as a pillow-slip when she tumbled down the stairs."

"No doubt there is some natural explanation for it, Eliza," I said. "You may have dreamed it, in your 'fainting' attack. But if it is true, the metal rod and the hole in the wall will show it."

Eliza looked a little bit sheepish.

"The hole's there all right, Miss Innes," she said. "But the bar was gone when Mary Anne and Rosie went up to pack my trunk."

"That wasn't all," Liddy's voice came funereally from a corner. "Eliza said that from the hole in the wall a burning eye looked down at her!"

"The wall must be at least six inches thick," I said with asperity. "Unless the person who drilled the hole carried his eyes on the ends of a stick, Eliza couldn't possibly have seen them."

But the fact remained, and a visit to Eliza's room proved it. I might jeer all I wished; some one had drilled a hole in the unfinished wall of the ballroom, passing between the bricks of the partition, and shooting through the unresisting plaster of Eliza's room with such force as to send the rod flying on to her bed. I had gone upstairs alone, and I confess the thing puzzled me; in two or three places in the wall small apertures had been made, none of them of any depth. Not the least mysterious thing was the disappearance of the iron implement that had been used.

Mary Anne and Eliza left that afternoon, but Rosie decided to stay. It was about five o'clock when the hack came from the station to get them, and, to my amazement, it had an occupant. Matthew Geist, the driver, asked for me, and explained his errand with pride.

"I've brought you a cook, Miss Innes," he said. "When the message came to come up for two girls and their trunks I supposed there was something doing, and as this here woman had been looking for work in the village I thought I'd bring her along."

Already I had acquired the true suburbanite ability to take servants on faith; I no longer demanded written and unimpeachable references. I, Rachel Innes, have learned not to mind if the cook sits down comfortably in my sitting room when she is taking the orders for the day, and I am grateful if the silver is not cleaned with scouring soap. And so that day I merely told Liddy to send the new applicant in. When she came, however, I could hardly restrain a gasp of surprise. It was the woman with the pitted face.

She stood somewhat awkwardly just inside the door, and she had an air of self-confidence that was inspiring. Yes, she could cook; was not a fancy cook, but could make good soups and desserts if there was any one to take charge of the salads. And so, in the end, I took her. As Halsey said, when we told him, it didn't matter much about the cook's face if it was clean.

I have spoken of Halsey's restlessness. On that day it seemed to be more than ever a resistless impulse that kept him out until after luncheon. I think he hoped constantly that he might meet Louise driving over the hills in her runabout; possibly he did meet her occasionally, but from his continued gloom I felt sure the situation between them was unchanged.

Part of the afternoon I believe he read—Gertrude and I were out, as I have said, and at dinner we both noticed that something had occurred to distract him. He was disagreeable, which is unlike him, nervous, looking at his watch every few minutes, and he ate almost nothing. He asked twice during the meal on what train Mr. Jamieson and the other detective were coming, and had long periods of abstraction during which he dug his fork into my damask cloth and did not hear when he was spoken to. He refused dessert, and left the table early, excusing himself on the ground that he wanted to see Alex.

Alex, however, was not to be found. It was after eight when Halsey ordered the car and started down the hill at a pace that, even for him, was unusually reckless. Shortly after Alex reported that he was ready to go over the house preparatory to closing it for the night. Sam Bohannon came at a quarter before nine and began his patrol of the grounds, and with the arrival of the two detectives to look forward to I was not especially apprehensive.

At half-past nine I heard the sound of a horse driven furiously up the drive. It came to a stop in front of the house and immediately after there were hurried steps on the veranda. Our nerves were not what they should have been, and Gertrude, always apprehensive lately, was at the door almost instantly. A moment later Louise had burst into the room and stood there bareheaded and breathing hard.

"Where is Halsey?" she demanded. Above her plain black gown her eyes looked big and somber, and the rapid drive had brought no color to her face. I got up and drew forward a chair.

"He has not come back," I said quietly. "Sit down, child; you are not strong enough for this kind of thing."

I don't think she even heard me.

"He has not come back?" she asked, looking from me to Gertrude. "Do you know where he went? Where can I find him?"

"For heaven's sake, Louise," Gertrude burst out, "tell us what is wrong. Halsey is not here. He has gone to the station for Mr. Jamieson. What has happened?"

"To the station, Gertrude? You are sure?"

"Yes," I said. "Listen. There is the whistle of the train now."

She relaxed a little at our matter-of-fact tone, and allowed herself to sink into a chair.

"Perhaps I was wrong," she said heavily. "He—will be here in a few moments if—everything is right."

We sat there, the three of us, without attempt at conversation. Both Gertrude and I recognized the futility of asking Louise any questions; her reticence was a part of a role she had assumed. Our ears were strained for the first throb of the motor as it turned into the drive and commenced the climb to the house. Ten minutes passed, 15, 20. I saw Louise's hands grow rigid as they clutched the arms of her chair. I watched Gertrude's bright color slowly ebbing away, and around my own heart I seemed to feel the grasp of a giant hand.

Twenty-five minutes, and then a sound. But it was not the chug of the motor; it was the unmistakable rumble of the Casanova hack. Gertrude drew aside the curtain and peered into the darkness.

"It's the hack, I am sure," she said, evidently relieved. "Something has gone wrong with the car, and no wonder—the way Halsey went down the hill."

It seemed a long time before the creaking vehicle came to a stop at the door. Louise rose and stood watching, her hand to her throat. And then Gertrude opened the door, admitting Mr. Jamieson and a stocky, middle-aged man. Halsey was not with them. When the door had closed and Louise realized that Halsey had not come, her expression changed. From tense watchfulness to relief, and now again to absolute despair, her face was an open page.

"Halsey?" I asked unceremoniously, ignoring the stranger. "Did he—not meet you?"

"No." Mr. Jamieson looked slightly surprised. "I rather expected the car, but we got up all right."

"You didn't see him at all?" Louise demanded breathlessly.

Mr. Jamieson knew her at once, although he had not seen her before. She had kept to her rooms until the morning she left.

"No, Miss Armstrong," he said. "I saw nothing of him. What is wrong?"

"Then we shall have to find him," she asserted. "Every instant is precious. Mr. Jamieson, I have reason for believing that he is in danger, but I don't know what it is. Only—he must be found."

The stocky man had said nothing. Now, however, he went quickly toward the door.

"I'll catch the hack down the road and hold it," he said. "Is the gentleman down in the town?"

"Mr. Jamieson," Louise said impulsively, "I can use the hack. Take my horse and trap outside and drive like mad. Try to find the Dragon Fly—it ought to be easy to trace. I can think of no other way. Only, don't lose a moment."

The new detective had gone, and a moment later Jamieson went rapidly down the drive, the cob's feet striking fire at every step. Louise stood looking after them. When she turned around she faced Gertrude, who stood indignant, almost tragic, in the hall.

"You know what threatens Halsey, Louise," she said accusingly. "I believe you know this whole horrible thing, this mystery that we are struggling with. If anything happens to Halsey, I shall never forgive you."

"I Believe You Know This Whole Horrible Thing, This Mystery."

Louise only raised her hands despairingly and dropped them again.

Prompted by Instinct.

There is a certain type of femininity which instinctively understands the proprieties of a buggy ride. Helen, aged three, cuddled up close to her father, this being her first ride with him unattended. As father tucked the robe about the dainty miss and chirped to his horse he asked: "What shall we talk about, dearie?" "Well, father," as she laid her little hand on his arm, "let's talk about loving each other."

AWFUL BURNING ITCH CURED IN A DAY

"In the middle of the night of March 30th I woke up with a burning itch in my two hands and I felt as if I could pull them apart. In the morning the itching had gone to my chest and during that day it spread all over my body. I was red and raw from the top of my head to the soles of my feet and I was in continual agony from the itching. I could neither lie down nor sit up. I happened to see about Cuticura Remedies, and I thought I would give them a trial. I took a good bath with the Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. I put it on from my head down to my feet and then went to bed. On the first of April I felt like a new man. The itching was almost gone. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and during that day the itching completely left me. Frank Gridley, 325 East 43rd Street, New York City, Apr. 27, 1909." The Key to Germany.

Capt. Charles King, the author, praised, at the Milwaukee club, the German element in Milwaukee's population.

"I know a soldier," said Capt. King, "who met the kaiser last year in Berlin.

"'You have a thorough knowledge of our best thought and customs,' said the kaiser. 'Have you ever been to Germany before?'

"'O, yes, sir,' said the soldier.

"'What cities have you visited? Berlin and Hamburg?' asked the kaiser.

"'No, sir,' said the soldier. 'Milwaukee.'"

What About Him?

The talk had gone back and fro, and the youthful socialist had been announcing that no man ought to get his living by cheating, and we all listened to him, and agreed that it was dreadful when men and women did not tell the truth, but tried to make their living by deceiving people. Millionaires, landowners, financiers, we scarified all of them who cheat the public. "No one should make a living by deception," said the young man. Then a quiet voice from a woman came from the corner of the sofa. "What about the conjurer?"—London Chronicle.

Laying the Foundation.

THE FIRST TASTE
Learned to Drink Coffee When a Baby.

If parents realized the fact that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which is especially harmful to children, they would doubtless hesitate before giving the babies coffee to drink.

"When I was a child in my mother's arms and first began to nibble things at the table, mother used to give me sips of coffee. As my parents used coffee exclusively at meals I never knew there was anything to drink but coffee and water.

"And so I contracted the coffee habit early. I remember when quite young the continual use of coffee so affected my parents that they tried roasting wheat and barley, then ground it in the coffee-mill, as a substitute for coffee.

"But it did not taste right and they went back to coffee again. That was long before Postum was ever heard of. I continued to use coffee until I was 27, and when I got into office work, I began to have nervous spells. Especially after breakfast I was so nervous I could scarcely attend to my correspondence.

"At night, after having coffee for supper, I could hardly sleep, and on rising in the morning would feel weak and nervous.

"A friend persuaded me to try Postum. My wife and I did not like it at first, but later when boiled good and strong it was fine. Now we would not give up Postum for the best coffee we ever tasted.

"I can now get good sleep, am free from nervousness and headaches. I recommend Postum to all coffee drinkers."

Remodeled Hat

HATS with wide, or moderately wide brims, have been much the same as to their brim outlines for several seasons, but variations have been evident in crowns. The possessor of a good velvet hat feels that it should do service for two or even three seasons and last year's hat with a graceful brim and a new up-to-date crown gives as much satisfaction, if not a little more, to the home economist, as spick and span new millinery.

The cleverness of the milliner is put to the test, to either replace the old crown with a new one, or put the trimming on the hat so that the outline of the old crown is concealed or changed. As it happens the task is not so difficult this season because puffed crowns are much favored, that is, crowns made of puffs of silk or velvet. Furthermore, trimming pieces, especially fancy feathers, are large and they conceal the top of the hat almost entirely.

An example of what may be done with a velvet hat, having a wide brim and small crown, is shown here. Two lengths of velvet, in two colors, each three-fourths of a yard long, are shirred on silk thread at each end. The thread matches the velvet in color and there are four rows of shirring. A lining of crinoline supports each piece. They are then mounted on the shape as shown in the picture and sewed down securely to it with stitches as nearly invisible as possible.

An ornament and a fancy feather, or ostrich plumes if preferred, make a charming finish. This is a matter of choice with the wearer.

The home milliner should find no difficulty in remodeling her last year's hat by this method.

TO COMPOUND COLD CREAM

Recipe for Most Valuable Toilet Preparation Which Can Be Made at Home.

To make sure of geting a cold cream in which there are no animal oils many women like to compound their own massage creams.

They often fail to get results from a good recipe by not understanding the art of compounding. All cold creams are made in the same way. The fatty substances are put in a double boiler and melted, stirring constantly. When all are melted turn out in a bowl and stir, scraping down from sides.

The chief trouble comes in adding the extracts and astringents, which must be added gradually when the fatty base is partially cold. Add first any perfumed water, drop by drop, beating constantly with a silver fork; then add tinctures or extracts last of all. These go in drop by drop also.

A flat wire egg beater can be used successfully when a large amount of the mixture is being made up and one woman swears by a mayonnaise mixer for compounding her toilet creams.

Here is a recipe that can be used freely without fear of becoming bearded or fuz : Eight tablespoonfuls each of almond oil and rosewater, two tablespoonfuls each of white wax and spermaceti, a teaspoonful of tincture of benzoin.

Melt the oil, then add the wax and spermaceti, and when nearly cold from beating add the rosewater, drop by drop, then the benzoin.

Discarded cheese jars of porcelain are nice to pack this cream in to stiffen. Keep in a cool place. Put in small jars so that in use it does not get germ filled by constant opening.

Novel Tunic Effect.

A pretty idea for the finishing of a tunic, especially one of veiling or other soft material, is to slash the tunic in front, like an overskirt, and knot it loosely at each side, drawing it away so as to show a great part of the underskirt up to the knees. The knots are made about half-way from the ankles and the tunic falls loosely below them. Of course, it is caught with a few stitches in back, to keep it in position.

New Barpins.

The latest in the "minor jewelry" is the long barpins, four to six inches in length, which are being used to fasten automobile veils and, less frequently, collars and jabots. They come in plain metal and enamel finishes and in the heavy, barbaric semi-precious stones so popular nowadays.

BABY'S TENDER SKIN

Chafed, Sore and Bleeding Quickly Cured

Mrs. J. F. Deal, Kansas City, Kans., writes:

"I cannot speak too highly of Resinol. When our baby was four months old she was so fat that she chafed in the creases of her legs and body. She was so sore and inflamed that she bled, and was fretting and crying almost constantly. Resinol Ointment was recommended to us. We had tried everything that could be thought of without success, but Resinol cured her in a very short time. We consider it the best household remedy for irritating skin troubles and would not be without it. We are also greatly pleased with Resinol Soap. It is so delightfully refreshing for the bath."

Resinol Ointment, Resinol Toilet Soap and Resinol Medicated Shaving Stick are high grade standard preparations, and their merit and reliability have won them a place in millions of homes. All About It.

To appreciate fully this scrap of dialogue, quoted from London Punch, one should see the two odd characters engaged in it. Apparently they parted satisfied, one that he had imparted some real information, the other that he had received some. Said one man:

"D'you recollec' old wot's-'is-name?"

"'Im with the collar?"

"Aye!"

"Wot ababt 'im?"

'E'ad to go down"—jerk of the head—"you know—they give 'im wot you call it—didn't arf git it, I don't think!"

Not Easy.

Pat was a married man—a very much married man. He had married no fewer than four times, and all his wives were still in the fore. According to Pat's own account before the court where he was tried for bigamy and found guilty, his experiences were not altogether satisfactory. The judge, in passing sentence, expressed his wonder that the prisoner could be such a hardened villain as to delude so many women.

"Yer honor," said Pat, apologetically, "I was only tryin' to get a good one, an' it's not aisy!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Deserved the Shoes.

The weary wayfarer leaned over the fence and watched the housewife doing her chores.

"Ah, lady," he said, tipping his hat, "I used to be a professional humorist. If I tell you a funny story will you give me an old pair of shoes?"

"Well, that depends," responded the busy housewife; "you must remember that brevity is the soul of wit."

"Yes, mum, I remember that, and brevity is the sole of each of my shoes, mum."

Getting a Reputation.

There is a desk in the senate particularly convenient as a place from which to make speeches. It is next to the aisle and almost in the center of the chamber, and affords an opportunity for the speaker to make everybody hear.

At least a dozen senators, according to the Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Star, have borrowed this desk when they had special utterances to deliver to the senate. This led, not long ago, to a mild protest from its legitimate occupant.

"I am perfectly willing to give up my desk," said he, "but I am afraid people will think that the same man is talking all the time. I don't want to get the reputation of constantly filling the senate with words."—Youth's Companion.

Some people treat the sermon as a table d'hote dinner, picking out the things that will not agree with them.

A good honest remedy for Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Sore Throat is Hamlins Wizard Oil. Nothing will so quickly drive out all pain and inflammation.

They who talk much of dying are usually dead already.

AFTER SUFFERING ONE YEAR

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wis.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman, and I would like to tell the whole world of it. I suffered from female trouble and fearful pains in my back. I had the best doctors and they all decided that I had a tumor in addition to my female trouble, and advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman and I have no more backache. I hope I can help others by telling them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—MRS. EMMA IMSE, 833 First St., Milwaukee, Wis.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

EMMANUEL CHURCH.

REV. M. L. TATE, Rector.

The following services will be held at Emmanuel Church on next Sunday which is the Sunday next before Advent. There will be an Early Celebration of the Holy Communion at eight o'clock. This Sunday is generally called Stir-up Sunday. The morning sermon will be appropriate to the day. Evening Prayer and sermon at 7:30 p. m. The theme of the evening sermon will be, "Doubts and How to Deal With Them."

Thanksgiving Day at Emmanuel Church. According to the usual custom there will be a Thanksgiving service in Emmanuel Church on Thanksgiving Day beginning promptly at 10 o'clock. There is a form of Prayer and Thanksgiving to Almighty God for the fruits of the earth and all other blessings of His Merciful Providence given in the Book of Common Prayer which is to be used on Thanksgiving Day.

The Rector of Emmanuel Church has sent invitations to the several Fire Companies of the City to worship at Emmanuel Church on Sunday evening, Nov. 27th. It is expected that all the companies will accept the invitation and turn out in a body for this service. Mr. Tate will secure Evening Prayer Leaflets on which the service is printed so that everyone can easily follow the service.

Strangers are always welcome at Emmanuel Church.

BLUE JAY.

FIRST FORK

The snow storms of the last week caught some of the farmers with their corn not all husked, but we expect some good husking weather yet, before the winter sets in, in dead earnest.

B. B. Lorshbaugh made a husking bee one day last week and got his corn pretty well out; then in the evening gave a dance to the huskers and neighbors. Dancing was kept up till the "wee sma' hours," when all went home reporting having had a good time. Fred Williams's orchestra furnished the music.

James Logue killed a yearling bear the fore part of last week, and Will Logue caught one in his trap on Saturday, and sold him to some hunters. Bert Williams caught one about the middle of the week, up Nelson Run. They are quite scarce about here yet.

C. E. Logue quit trapping bear and went up to clerking in Billy Horton's store at Wharton. We understand he is down home now, however, and is going to hunt deer for a few days. As there is plenty of tracking snow on the mountains, some of our "Nimrods" may crowd the season, a day or two by the time it opens on Tuesday.

The farmers, some of them, must be expecting an early winter, as they are already butchering their hogs.

Mr. and Mrs. Essington, who have been operators at Lorshbaugh, are moving to Cross Fork Junction, which is considered in line of promotion. A man by the name of Clark is stationed at Lusbach.

Uncle Geo. Mahon, one of the oldest settlers on Bennett's Branch, was buried at Hicks Run on election day, I believe. Got no particulars; he must have been crowding the century mark, if not past it. He left a brother, John, in Wharton township, Pa., who wasn't able to attend the funeral.

It is reported that Mrs. Elsie Beckner leaves for home, in Laurel, Miss., this week, and will be accompanied by her sister, Ciella, as far as DuBois, where she will visit Con and Merle Nelson's family, and other friends for a spell.

Mrs. Charlotte Johnson, of Owego, N. Y., who came to attend Mrs. M. J. Logue's funeral, was taken sick but is reported on the gain now.

Mrs. Geo. Mahon, of Berge Run, is very low and no hopes are entertained for her recovery.

Henry Caldwell, of Sinnamahoning, was up to see his sister, Mrs. Wes. Berfield, who has been sick a long time, but is improving now.

The "wind work" is being done for a Grange to be established here soon. This attack comes on periodically, but it looks this time as though it might "Pan Out," as there are enough signers to warrant getting a Charter.

There appears to be more hunters than game, though a good many pheasants have been killed. So far no accidents reported among the hunters.

Saves an Iowa Man's Life.

The very grave seemed to yawn before Robert Madson, of West Burlington, Iowa, when, after seven weeks in the hospital, four of the best physicians gave him up. Then was shown the marvelous curative power of Electric Bitters. For, after eight months of frightful suffering from liver trouble and yellow jaundice, getting no help from other remedies or doctors, five bottles of this matchless medicine completely cured him. It's positively guaranteed for Stomach, Liver or Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Only 50c. at all druggists.

DRIFTWOOD.

Probably the greatest pleasure experienced by the Driftwood schools, as a whole, was, when the teachers and pupils returned from their vacation, a handsome piano was placed in the school. This gift was presented by Father McAvenue. There is no doubt that Father McAvenue takes great interest in the boys and girls of Driftwood. The pupils, teachers, and directors are greatly pleased and an effort will be made to show their gratification by making the best possible use of the piano.

Miss Ethel Winslow, of Reynoldsville, who has been visiting her brother, Mr. A. Winslow, returned to her home Monday.

Mr. Eldred Kreider, who has been in Garrett, Ind.. for some time, returned home on Monday, Nov. 7th, to assist his father in the store. After spending some time in Northumberland and Philadelphia he enjoyed a trip through Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, and then located in Garrett, Ind. for a time. Some of the places of interest which he visited were Washington, D. C., Baltimore and Chicago, where he witnessed one of the National games.

Miss Ethel Runyan was in Driftwood on Sunday evening.

Miss Gertrude Hacket, who is teaching at Grove Hill, was home over Sunday.

Mrs. G. L. Smith spent a few days in DuBois last week.

The Ladies Aid Society decided to meet on Thursday afternoon to make arrangements for the Odd Fellows' Banquet.

Mrs. Dr. Gray was in town on Saturday.

The walls and ceilings of the school rooms have been greatly improved by a coat of calsomine, and the woodwork by a coat of stain. New curtains have been bought for all of the windows, and some new books have been added to the library.

Mr. William Schweikart, of Emporium, was in town on Monday.

Mr. Norman Webster, of Renovo, spent Monday evening at the home of S. P. Kreider.

Mr. Roy Kreider, of Northumberland, attended Masonic Lodge on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Gleason, who started on Oct. 13, for a trip through the western States, returned on Monday evening. Some of the places they visited were Chicago, Denver, Colorado Springs, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Spokane and Seattle.

STERLING RUN.

Mrs. Hugh McDonald, who lived here some years ago, is visiting old friends in town.

John Neenan has accepted a position with the Mount Hope Coal Co., as watchman on the engine.

Mrs. Wm. Buck, of Ridgway, was a visitor in town Tuesday.

Mrs. John Anderson, who has been suffering with inflamation of the eyes, is some better at this writing.

Mrs. A. W. Wylie left Monday to visit friends and relatives at Lock Haven and Williamsport.

Miss Nellie Whiting, who has been working the last year at Marianna, Pa., came home on Tuesday, on account of the building in which she worked being recently destroyed by fire.

J. H. Darren was a visitor at Emporium Tuesday.

Mike Parker, Wilson Berry, Chas. Howlett, went to Mosquito Creek, Monday to hunt for deer.

Elmer Whiting is having an addition built to his residence.

Mrs. J. A. Dice was a visitor at Emporium and Renovo Saturday.

Squire Eddy and C. A. Dice have very valuable dogs. One goes out and catches pheasants and brings them in, while the other goes up the trees after squirrels.

L. L. Ebersole, who has been ill with tonsilitis the past week, is able to be out at this writing.

Douglas Smith, of Felix, W. Va., is home visiting relatives and friends here.

J. A. Dice, Pennsy agent, who has had trouble with his eyes for the last three weeks, resumed work Monday.

BLUE BELL.

SINNAMAHONING.

Well, hunting season is on and the woods are full of hunters.

Bears are coming in slow this season. Chas. Pitts brought in a small one last Monday.

Will Colwell caught a bear on Saturday in his new-fangled trap, which hangs them up when it catches them, so that he will not have to hunt for them.

Jim Batchelder brought in a fine bear on Saturday and on Monday he had another one waiting for him, which was too much for him to get in alone so he came in for a team. This was the largest one of the season, weighing 300 lbs.

J. Henry Logue is up for guide to lone hunters, who are afraid they might get lonesome. They might get tired but never lonesome if Henry is with them.

Chas. Krebs and party of neighbors went out after the big buck on Bucks point.

Geo. P. Shafer is improving his new hotel getting ready for winter.

John Logve is located at Oak Hill this fall. He talks of taking a wife from that place soon.

Council Brothers are putting in the glass front in their store this week.

R. M. Williams, of First Fork, has purchased a Jersey cow of A. J. Barclay.

James Mead came in from Potato Creek this week and has gone to work for the Cameron Powder Company.

Mrs. Geo. Batchelder visited Driftwood last Monday.

Where is John Jordan of Huntley? We have not heard from him yet in regard to bears. Where is that bear that hunted him at Brook's Run last summer.

Mr. Gillburg the baker is pretty busy these days. The hunters are taking the bread about as fast as it is baked.

J. D. Council started on his annual hunt on Monday. He expects to capture a big one with immense horns this season.

John Colwell an old resident and hunter of the First Fork has been oiling his 40-70 and using a pain balm and is going to try for a buck again this fall. He has the fever as well as the younger boys.

"Pap" Blodgett" is putting globe sights on his rifle, getting ready for a bear or deer. He says it makes no difference which.

All the teams around here are busy getting hunting outfits into the woods.

There are three parties in Wykoff Run, 30 on Karthaus mountain, nine on Temple Hill, 17 in Cooks Run, one in Arksville Run, four in Big Run, one in Brum, two in Locks Run, and three carloads of hunters and dogs up at First Fork. Deer will have to suffer as most of the hunters have high power guns, that will kill a mile.

It is very quiet here to-day, Tuesday, and many are anxious for their friends who are in the woods as some hunters don't know the difference from a man to a deer.

There was no skating at the Rink last Saturday night as the Rebekah Lodge had the hall for the evening.

John Swartz is handling the ribbons of the Council Brothers team this week.

D. W. Dougherty has sold his property to Chas. Erickson. Mr. Dougherty will move to Jamestown, N. Y., this week.

Mr. Earl Towers, of Driftwood, was down on Sunday to see his best girl.

James Donley left for Hunter's Rest on Monday. He says he wants the old does to stay away from him this fall as he did not like his boarding place last winter.

Chas. Meixell is catching some monster coons this fall. Jim Batchelder says they are bigger than cub bears and he don't see why he cannot catch some of those big ones.

Mignon Rebekah Lodge, No. 395 was instituted here by Mrs. Lizzie Stone, Grand Warden of the Rebekah Assembly, assisted by Mrs. Celia Witherup, Dept. President of McKean county. Forty-one members signed the constitution and the new lodge starts off in good shape. Grace Rebekah Degree staff of Renovo were up and exemplified the work in an able manner. Logue's Hall had been prepared for the occasion, which gave the degree staff plenty of room and it was surely fine. All was very quiet in the room when the staff formed the emblems of the order, but when the 32 ladies formed the three links they were given a hearty applause. At six P. M., after the lodge was instituted they all went to the P. O. S. of A. hall where a banquet was ready for all, served by a committee of Rebekahs in charge of Mrs. Sarah Silin. After the banquet they returned to Logue's hall there to initiate 11 more members who were not on the charter. The degree staff was in charge of Bro. McNichols, of Renovo. After the work was completed they all went to the P. O. S. of A. Hall again, where refreshments were served and the balance of the time was spent in a social visit until train time and the Renovo people left for their homes with the best wishes of the members of the Mignon Rebekahs. Mr. and Mrs. Batchelder have been working for the new lodge for some time and their efforts are crowned with success. The new lodge has a good staff of officers and will be a great help to I. O. O. F.

Emporium Social Club.

The members of the Emporium Social Club held a meeting at the rooms of the Republican Club last Monday evening. Important business was transacted and four new members were added to the list, making a total of 56 members The charter member list was fixed at 60 as the limit, leaving place for four more members to get in on the charter. The club membership was limited at 75. This club is a permanent feature and plans are being made to continue dances all the year round. An organization of this kind has long been needed in Emporium and that one is started let the good work go on, the members, all take an interest in it and all put their shoulders to the wheel, help with the work and then the Emporium Social Club will be the success that it is intended to be. A business meeting will be held on the second Monday of each month and all members should make it a point to be present.

All of us can remember when the wage-earner lived in what he would now call poverty. The Protective Tariff has, in one short life period, moved him into a comfortable home, put a piano in the house, dressed the the family well, educated the children, and paid for some life insurance besides. It will take a lot of sophistry to make him forget this.
